HOUSE. Private Orders A busy day Pre-emption Bill.

SENATE. Nothing interesting—Something done Washington Monument.

MISCELLANY. Acquittal of Richard H. White Extraordinary conduct of a Jury Continuous warm weather amusements.

This has been a very busy day in the House of Representatives, and Senate of the United States, and yet but little was done throughout it, in either, of the least consequence to the general reader. Private and general orders, the usual routine of incidental business, exciting but little debate, and that of a kind which can be called conversation more properly than discussion, were the theme of attention, and in that way the day was spent.

The Pre-emption Bill passed, with various amendments, after my letter was closed, yesterday, and it was returned to the Senate, from whence it emanated, as amended.

Among the bills postponed indefinitely, in the Senate, to-day, was one passed by the House granting the Washington Monument Association leave to build the proposed structure upon the public mall in this city. The objection taken to the bill was alleged faithlessness and neglect, in the collectors of subscriptions for the grand scheme of raising a tribute of grateful remembrance to the memory of Pater Patriæ. The managers assert that their exertions have resulted in collecting only thirty thousand dollars, in the whole of this broad land, saved, freed and enfranchised by the extraordinary wisdom, courage, and sagacity of that great man, for the purposes of this company's organization. This fact was commented on, in a speech of much force and eloquence, by Allen of Ohio, who boldly avowed it to be his opinion that such a report was a libel upon the patriotism and justice of the great people; and before the Senate should vote for this bill, he insisted that they ought to demand, and to have laid before them a minute account of the collections in every State, and in every County of the Union, with the manner of its expenditure, if expended at all, &c. He moved to postpone indefinitely the consideration of the bill: and the motion prevailed.

Richard H. White, (his brother having been condemned to ten years imprisonment, for being his accomplice,) having been tried three times before, on a charge of burning the Treasury buildings, was tried a fourth time, and yesterday acquitted, on the alleged ground that he was not arrested on this charge within the time prescribed by law. But nine of the jury that acquitted him, gave him a certificate of innocence (!!) on the charge itself, before leaving the Court House. They had assented to the verdict, as the only one the other three would give, but they, the nine, would not have done it, they say, had they thought it could leave the least imputation on his "innocence." This is certainly a queer proceeding. The last trial, a year or more ago, resulted in the disagreement of a jury, one man holding out against eleven, which eleven had no doubt of the fellow's guilt, and of his having been properly arrested. Yet the scoundrel walks free! The evidence was clear and distinct enough against him to hang forty men: nor do I believe that in any court north of Goose Creek or Tiber as they call it here, such mockery of justice could be perpetrated.

We have had it here, warm enough for three days to make three entire Maine summers, already. And yet we continue to keep amused. Excursions down the broad and beautiful Potomac, or up the canal to the gorgeous falls of that noble and most picturesque of rivers, to Pierce's Aromatic Garden, or the neighboring retreats of Maryland and Virginia are very delightful recreations during these heats. Our nights are very fine, and are improved for walking to a great extent. But there is very little social visiting at this season. A damp has been thrown on this kind of thing by the occurrence of the very impolitic and exclusive parties, given by members of Congress to Congressional families alone. This certainly seems churlish to those who have thrown open their doors, in the District, for the entertainment of these would be exclusives: but that is no matter of mine. M. C's are, with few exceptions, the dullest of all sets, socially speaking, of which Washington society is made up.

Then we have Forrest playing Bulwer's beautiful new piece at the National Theatre, and Ellen Tree is to be here next week, and we have had Concerts, and there are horticultural exhibitions, and social gatherings in the eastern part of the capitol twice a week, where the [illegible] band plays, and ladies and gentlemen lounge, and there are dances at Carusi's, [illegible] at Kinchey's, and moonlight lounging among the fine grounds of the [illegible], and so we contrive to [illegible] to-day. Steno.

A. B. K[illegible] F[illegible], the Whig candidate for Governor of [illegible], in a letter to the Whig [illegible] announced himself in favor of a [illegible] Bank of good Banks generally. He [illegible] expressed himself in favor of Henry Clay.

SPEECH OF MR. BOND.

We wish our limits would permit us to lay before the readers of this paper the whole speech of Mr. Bond, of Ohio, recently delivered in Congress. It comes right to the point and is true but just. The professions of the prominent men now in power are admirably contrasted with their practices of these same men. As the great length of the document will prevent us from giving it entire, we present the following abstract from the Ohio State Journal, and ask for it, an attentive perusal:

Mr Bond very properly opens his speech by copious citations of the complaints urged against Mr Adams' Administration, of favoritism and extravagance; and then proceeds to show that not only have Van Buren, Benton, Buchanan, and so forth, failed to fulfil their pledges to the People to retrench expenses and correct abuses, but that they have increased the one, and greatly extended the other.

Mr Benton, in his famous Retrenchment Report of 1826, gave a list of all the officers, with their salaries, at the custom-house in the city of New York. The number was 174, and their aggregate pay $119,620 39. Benton exclaims "A formidable list, indeed! formidable in numbers, and still more so from the vast amount of money in their hands. The action of such a body of men, animated by one spirit, must be tremendous in an election." Mr Benton continues at length to expose the dangerous tendency of the patronage at the President's command, and to show the necessity of checking it. So much for the precept. Mr Bond shows that the number of custom-house officers has grown from 174 to 414! and their compensation from $119,062 39 to $409,669 32! besides extra pay allowed for the year 1836 of $53,000! Further: Mr Swartwout was recently turned out of the office of Collector, for professing anti-Sub Treasury opinions, and a new Collector a supple instrument appointed in his stead. A few days ago this new Collector discharged one hundred of the officers Conservatives and Whigs and gave their places and their pay to men who will do more work for the party at the next election.

Great complaint was made in 1828, on the score of Executive and Legislative patronage of the press. The Retrenchment Report states that in three years of the Administration of Mr Adams, the Executive Departments paid for printing and advertising $71,830 51. Mr Bond shows that in three years of the Reformers, the same Departments paid for the like purposes, $170,058 18! The committee pronounce extravagant, the expenditure during EIGHT years preceding December, 1827, for printing for Congress, the sum of $271,883 37. Mr Bond shows that in the SIX years preceding September, 1837, there was paid for the same purpose, the enormous sum of $751,584 62! In six years the Reformers expend nearly three times as great a sum as the Whigs did in eight years!

Of the reform which has occurred in the Executive Departments generally, Mr Bond makes a full exposition. We extract from his remarks on this head liberally:—

Precept. The committee reported that "the privilege of newspapers to the members ought to be abrogated;" and "that the practice too often indulged in by the House of voting to themselves copies of books," ought to be discontinued. The privilege and practice continue, and without restraint.

Precept. The contingent expenses of this House were reported to be extravagant. During the year 1828, the last of Mr. Adams' administration, they amounted to $80,000.

Practice. During the year 1836, the last year of the Jackson reform Administration, this item was $200,000! And, during the year 1836, being the first year of the "successor," who promised to "tread in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessor," these expenses are $210,000! This must be the "magician's way" of working in the rule of reduction—it was certainly unknown to old Thomas Dilworth.

Precept. The committee, of which I again repeat, the gentleman from New York (Mr Cambreleng) was a member, reported that they had obtained information by which they were satisfied "that by a judicious system of reform, instituted by the Executive officers themselves, at least one-third of the (then) present number of clerks in the departments might be reduced with safety to the public interest."

Practice. The number of clerks has not been reduced in any one of the departments, but on the contrary, there has been a considerable increase. I will prove it. The State Department, in the year 1828, included the Patent Office, and the whole number of clerks was sixteen; the salary and compensation of the Secretary and all his clerks and messengers, amounted to $27,750.

The whole number of clerks now employed in the State Department and the Patent Office is forty. The joint salaries and compensations amount to $56,515!!

The Patent Office, in 1828, was managed by a Superintendent, with a salary of $1,500, and two clerks and a messenger, whose joint compensation was $3,700. It is now under the charge of one of the Reformers; the title of "Superintendent" is exchanged for that of "Commissioner;" and with the change of titles comes the change of salary from $1,500 to $3,000! The number of clerks is increased from two to twentyfour, and the compensation from $1,800 to $21,000; and not content with one messenger, and his old salary of $400, they provide a salary of $840 for a messenger, and then give him an assistant, to whom is also paid $15 per month.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in the year 1828, employed eight clerks and two messengers. His salary, and the compensation of the clerks and messengers, amounted to $18,600.

The present Secretary of that department (and he was taken from the body of reformers, who made proclamation from the Senate chamber) employs fifteen clerks and two messengers. His salary, and their compensation, amount to $27,100!! A similar result will be found in comparing the present with the former state of the several subdivisions of the Treasury Department. But, by way of "introducing economy and despatch in the Treasury Department," the committee proposed to "simplify the forms of business, and to organize its subordinate branches, so as to dispense with one-fourth, if not one-third, of the officers in the Treasury." Now, sir, no reorganization of the Department has yet been attempted. Instead of reducing, they have increased the number of officers; and the forms of business, under the new mode of simplifying, have become so complicated, that the gentleman from New York, (Mr Cambreleng) now chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, declared here, during the last special session, that, after fifteen years experience as a member of this House, he found it difficult to understand the Treasury [illegible], and the manner in which the Secretary's Annual Report on the Finances is made!!

Next, as to the War Department. In 1828, the Secretary of War employed a chief clerk, besides seventeen clerks and two messengers. His salary, and their compensation, amounted to $[illegible].

The business of Indian affairs was then managed by him also. In 1838, the Secretary of that Department employs, inclusive of the Indian business, about forty clerks, besides messengers. The [illegible] annual compensation of the whole amount to $63,810.

In 1828, we hear nothing of a Commanding General's Office, with its clerks and messengers.

In 1838, the Commanding General is allowed a clerk at $1,200, and a messenger at $600 per year.

In 1828, the Adjutant General's Office employed three clerks, whose joint compensation was $2,960.

In 1838, the Adjutant General employs seven clerks and a messenger, whose joint compensation is $6,225.

In 1828, the Paymaster General employed three clerks, whose united compensation was $3,800.

In 1838, the salary of the same number of clerks is $4,290, besides the messenger's salary.

In 1828, I have been unable to discover any allowance for clerks to the Quarter Master General.

In 1838, that officer employs in the office at Washington, seven clerks, whose united compensation is $7,300.

In 1828, the Ordnance office employed three clerks, whose joint salary was $2,950.

In 1838, the Ordnance office employs nine clerks, besides a messenger, and their aggregate compensation is $9,225.

In 1828, the Subsistence Department employed four clerks, whose joint compensation was $2,050.

In 1838, the Subsistence Department employs four clerks and a messenger, whose joint compensation is $5,860.

In 1828, the Surgeon General was allowed a clerk, at $1,150 per year.

In 1838, the Surgeon General is allowed a clerk at $1,200, and a messenger at $600 per year.

In 1808, the business of Indian Affairs was discharged at the War Department, by some one or two of the seventeen clerks which I first mentioned.

In 1838 this Indian business appears to constitute a grand division. We now hear of the "Indian Department," with a Commissioner, whose salary is $3,000, a chief clerk, at $1,600, and eleven clerks, and two messengers, the joint compensation and salaries being $19,400.

Let us next compare the Navy Department. Mr. Southard, who was Secretary of the Navy in 1828, employed in his Department seven clerks, besides the chief clerk. The salary of the Secretary, and the compensation of the clerks and messengers amounted to $17,250. The Department has been held for many years, and is still managed by Mr Dickerson, who was a member of the committee, in the Senate, from whom came that famous report on Executive patronage, to which I first referred. He employs eight clerks besides the chief clerk; and his salary with the compensation of his clerks and messengers, amounts to $18,850. And, at this very session, he demands more clerks, and an increase in the salary of some he already has.

The committee also specify the sum of $466 86, as paid by the Navy Department, in three years, for printing, and condemn it as extravagant.

The Blue Book of 1827 shows the Navy Department, under the reformer, Mr. Dickerson, to have paid $[illegible] for printing in two years!

Mr. Bond cites Mr. Kendall's complaints against his predecessors, for subscribing for newspapers at the public expense—the whole number being 16. Mr. Bond reads from the Post Master General's contingent expenses, a list of twenty papers now received by him at a subscription of $200, for which the public pay. We extract several items:—

We close our abstract of Mr. Bond's speech by laying before the reader the eloquent and forcible remarks with which that gentleman submitted the subject "to the House and to the People." We call upon the latter to weigh well the testimony here adduced. That they have been cozened and hoodwinked by the spendthrifts at Washington City, none can doubt after perusing the speech of Mr. Bond.

Mr. Bond says:

Sir, has not the country been disappointed? Have not the People been deceived and allured by specious and vain promises? Has not the Federal Executive patronage inordinately increased, and is it not still unrestrained? Is not the power over it abused and perverted? Do not the expenses of our General Government far transcend in amount all our past history? Why are these things so, and why has not this "plague been stayed," Mr. Speaker, according to your plighted faith? I will tell you why, sir, but I prefer doing so in the language and illustration of one of your own friends, Mr Buchanan, of the Senate, to whom I have before referred. In his speech here, to which I have already alluded, and when he was assailing the (then) Administration, he thus exclaimed: "The very possession of power has a strong, a natural tendency to corrupt the heart. The lust of dominion grows with its possession, and the man who, in humble life, was pure, and innocent, and just, has often been transformed, by the long possession of power, into a monster. In the sacred Book, which contains lessons of wisdom for the politician as well as for the christian, we find a happy illustration of the corrupting influence of power upon the human heart. When Hazael came to consult Elisha whether his master, the King of Syria, would recover from a dangerous illness, the prophet, looking through the vista of futurity, saw the crimes of which the messenger, who stood before him, would be guilty, and he wept. Hazael asked, "why weepeth my lord?" The prophet then recounted to him the murders and the crimes of which he should be guilty towards the children of Israel. Hazael, in the spirit of virtuous indignation, replied: "Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this thing?" And Elisha answered, "The Lord hath shown me that thou shalt be King of Syria." This man afterwards became King by the murder of his master, and was guilty of enormities, the bare recital of which would make us shudder."

How true, and alas! how applicable is this sacred illustration to those who have aided in elevating [illegible] to power!

[illegible], Mr. Speaker, [illegible], that some inspired Elisha had been present, and you and Mr. Buchanan, with others, engaged in the debate, [illegible], moved by the sympathetic tear of the prophet, You had asked, "Why weepeth my lord?" [illegible] could you have [illegible] this country have since realized.

Imagine, sir, the inspired one looking through the vista of a few brief years and saying, You will be placed in power, but will greatly increase [illegible] of all public [illegible]. You will use the offices and patronage of the country for private and not for public good. You will create offices for favorites. You will enlarge all Executive [illegible]. You will deny the right to call for reasons of removal from office, [illegible] will remove more than 1600 [illegible] from office for opinion's sake! You will derange and corrupt the Post office Department, which you now admit to be sound, and you will not reform any of your designated abuses in the other Departments. You will appoint [illegible] members of Congress to office in four years than has been done in all the past history of the Government. Your bill for the abolition of the power and patronage over the Press will sleep the sleep of death. You will retain "the press, the post office, the armed force, and the appointing power in the hands of the President, and will not suffer them to change position and take post on the side of the People." You now censure a small appropriation to purchase some additional furniture for the President's house, but you will furnish that house in luxurious style for Gen. Jackson, who will be succeeded by Mr. Van Buren, and he, not content with the second-hand furniture of his predecessor, will cast it off and make his entry into that edifice, with one appropriation of $7,300 for alterations of the house and superintendence of the grounds, and another appropriation of 20,000 for new furniture; and this too, in the very year when your public treasury will be bankrupt. You will increase the expenses of foreign missions and suffer your Ministers to return home on such brief service as will show their appointments to have been made for individual gain rather than public good. You will increase the contingent expenses of this House from 80,000, the present annual amount, to $210,000. You will add to the like expenses of the Senate and to all other expenditures in the same ratio; and the sum total for the whole civil list and ordinary appropriations of the Government, which is now $12,163,438, will be increased from time to time under your boasted reform, until it shall exceed thirty millions per year!

You now question the right of a department to purchase a print or likeness of the immortal Washington, but will decorate every room in all the departments with portraits of Martin Van Buren. You will, by means of "the office-holders," the "enlisted soldiers," as you have just called them, bring the patronage of the General Government into conflict with the freedom of elections, and you will resist the bill that shall be brought in to secure the freedom of those elections. You, Mr. Randolph, will go upon what you now call a "sleeveless errand," and, after saluting the Emperor of Russia, will make a pleasant sojourn in "old England," and return to your estate in Virginia. You, Mr. Buchanan, will become an "office holder and enlisted soldier," go on the very mission to Russia which you are now censuring, and will pocket the $18,000 for a twelve month and a day's" service. You, (to the gentleman from New York,) Mr. Cambreleng, will oppose a vote against the very measure which you now report and recommend, for reducing the pay of members, as a means of shortening the session of Congress. You, Mr. Stephenson, will be made Speaker of this House, and appoint its committees, and dispense its rules, with the promise of a foreign mission in your pocket. You, Mr. Benton, will vote to-day on the table the bill which you now report to take the patronage of the press from the Government, and your report on Executive patronage, with its six accompanying bills so imposingly introduced, will prove to have been as "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals!" You, Mr. Van Buren, who now, as a member of the committee on Executive patronage, report a bill requiring reasons to be assigned for removing an incumbent from office, will be made Secretary of State, and in due time President, but, from the moment you obtain power, you will forget your bill, and not only violate but refuse to be governed by its principles. You, Mr. Dickerson, also a member of that committee, will be made Secretary of the Navy; but the department will be so mismanaged under your direction, that it will be truly said of you on the floor of Congress, "there is none so poor as to do him reverence." You, Mr. Woodbury, will take first the Navy and then the Treasury Department, and, under your supervision, an attempt to humbug the people with the promise of an exclusive hard money currency will result in the banishment of all specie, a bankrupt Treasury, and a circulation of shin plasters and Treasury Notes.

Imagine, then, Mr. Speaker, such a response to have been made at the period of time which I have suggested. What would have been your reply, and what would Mr. Buchanan, who made the scriptural allusion, have said? Methinks I almost see and hear him exclaim, "is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?"

We are told that, notwithstanding the indignation of Hazael, he reached the throne of Syria, by murdering the King his master, and soon committed all the enormities foretold by the prophet!

Sir, I fear that, in despite of the protestations of Amos Kendall, the promised "reform" was "an empty sound," "intended to apply merely to a change of men." But I leave it for this House and for the people of this country to judge whether their confidence has not been betrayed and their hopes disappointed.

NEWS BY STEAMBOAT.

By the [illegible] who came in the Post last evening, we have received the [illegible], the Times extra, and the Evening Express of yesterday evening. We omit a portion of the matter intended for to-day, to give the latest news.

In addition to what we give below, we are under the painful necessity of announcing the sudden death of Miss [illegible], occasioned as the Jury of Inquest say "by inflammation of the brain, caused by great mental excitement, induced jointly by the violent conduct of her mother and the publication of an abusive article in the Polyanthos" a paper published by the notorious George W. Dixon. Further particulars to-morrow.

News is also received of the confirmation by the Senate of James K. Paulding, as Secretary of the Navy. Other items of news will be given to-morrow, being one day earlier than by regular course of mail in our paper.

ARRIVAL OF THE GREAT WESTERN.

The steam ship Great Western arrived at New York at 5 o'clock on Monday morning. She sailed from Bristol on the evening of the 2d inst. and made the passage in fourteen days and twelve hours. She made the passage from New York to Bristol, where she arrived on the 22d May, at noon, in fourteen days, and would have made it in thirteen, but for a detention of twenty-four hours, occasioned by some carelessness of an assistant engineer in some operation a day or two out of port. She did not leave Bristol on the day she was expected to sail, in consequence of some change in the arrangements after she arrived. Her arrival in England was greeted with the heartiest demonstrations of joy and congratulations. One of the papers thinks that Captains Hoskens and Roberts ought to receive the honors of knighthood.

The Manchester bells were rung upon the receipt of the news of her arrival. A public meeting was to be held in Bristol on the 7th to express the sense of the Bristolians of the hospitality of New York. The meeting was to be called by the Mayor, the requisition to him having been signed by the principal merchants "to express to the Government of the United States, and particularly to the citizens of New York, their sense of the hospitable reception to Captain Hoskens, the officers and crew of the Great Western on her arrival at New York."

The meeting would have taken place on the first of June, but for another grand frolic, the opening of the Great Western Railway, from London to Maidenhead, twenty-two miles. The papers are full of the excellent finish of the road and the cars which went over it at the rate of 28 miles an hour, notwithstanding the stoppages and caution at certain points where work was going on. At dinner at Salt Hill, Mr Bright, of the Bristol Board of Directors gave "The President of the United States and the sea borne termination of the Great Western Railway." It was received with tremendous cheering. Many of the stockholders are engaged both in the railway and the navigation company. He said that the Great Western steamship had brought New York almost to the Western terminus of their line, and ere 14 days had passed, he trusted that her passengers would carry that day's proceedings to the United States.

The Sirius arrived at Falmouth May 18th, being 18 days from New York. The detention, Captain Roberts writes, was owing to the badness of the coal—for eighteen days now seems a tedious time to cross the Atlantic! The Sirius had left London for Cork, and was to sail from the latter, May 31, for New York. Capt. Trowle now commands her. Capt. Roberts takes the British Queen.

By this arrival, we have accounts from England seventeen days later from London and eighteen from Liverpool.

Prince de Joinville, by an ordinance of May 27, is promoted to the captaincy of a corvette.

Talleyrand died on the 17th of May. He rode out a day or two before his death. He received the unction and absolution, but the Archbishop of Paris kept aloof from him. King Louis Philippe visited him, and though nearly dying, the old diplomat insisted on presenting in due form, those in the room to the King, and thanked him for the honor. A last act of his life was asking forgiveness of the Pope for his participation in the Federation. He died with firmness.

The directors of the Great Western steam ship company have passed a resolution that another great steam vessel be immediately commenced, which is to be called The City of New York.

No less than four new companies have been formed in London for steam navigation across the Atlantic. Measures of the like nature were also in progress in Ireland.

A meeting was held at Liverpool on the 22d of May, at which it was resolved to form a joint stock steam navigation company, to facilitate the intercourse between that port and New York. The proposed capital of the company is £500,000.

It is announced in the Liverpool papers that the City of Dublin Company are also prepared to share in the [illegible] of trans Atlantic navigation.
